

Internet communications that do not touch the PSTN should NOT be considered as something needing regulating. It is an exchange of data between individuals or companies. Regulation would just cause delays in development of new technologies and experimentation.

Also regulation would give other countries a competitive edge in developing these technologies and the royalties that would follow.